Sunil Bald, AIA is a founding design principal of Studio SUMO and a registered architect in the state of New York. He received degrees from Columbia University (M.Arch) and UC Santa Cruz (B.A. Biology). Before Studio SUMO, Sunil worked for five years in architecture firms in Albuquerque, NM and New York that specialized in academic and cultural buildings. Studio SUMO has been featured as one of Architectural Record's "Design Vanguard" and the Architectural League of New York's "Emerging Voices." His firm has received a Young Architects award from the Architectural League, fellowships from NYFA and NYSCA, and was a finalist in the Museum of Modern Art's Young Architects program. SUMO's work, which ranges from installations to institutional buildings, has received three AIA Design Awards and has been exhibited in the National Building Museum, MoMA, the Venice Biennale, the Field Museum, the GA Gallery, and the Urban Center. Sunil has received fellowships from the Graham Foundation, NYFA, and the Fulbright Foundation. In 2006 he held the Louis Kahn Visiting Assistant Professorship at Yale, where he has remained on the faculty. Sunil has also taught at Cornell, Columbia, University of Michigan, and Parsons.
